SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.

1. The Chinese Communists maintain radio stations in South China not only for military and administrative purposes, but also to facilitate the business transactions of certain Chinese Communist-controlled business enterprises. Among the latter organizations are the Ta Chung Hang (大衆行), the Tai Hsing Hang (泰興行), and the Hui Chien Hang (惠建行), all of which are in Huiyanghsien (114-26, 23-05). The profits from these firms are reported to be used for political and military purposes.
2. These radio stations include powerful transmitters of Japanese or American manufacture. They are generally situated in the mountains at some distance from the villages.
3. Some Chinese Communist radio stations in South China are located as follows:
Tapu (116-42, 24-29), in the Tungkufeng area (銅鼓峯)
Chaoan (116-37, 23-42), in the Nanshan (Mountains) (南山)
Huiyang (114-26, 23-05), in the Pingshan (Mountains) (平山)
Lungmen (114-04, 23-46), in the Tiekang area (鐵崗)
Nanhsiung (114-17, 25-13), in the Yungho area (永和) ([REDACTED]), which reports the Yungho area station with a transmitter sufficiently powerful to reach Moscow.)
